Thinking Out Loud

H. M. L.

A white blackbird would be no more strange in a flock of black blackbirds than would be seating a life member of the Ku Klux Klan on the United States Supreme Bench. In nature there are, to be sure, occasional white blackbirds. But a Ku Kluxer on the Supreme Court would constitute one of the most amazing spectacles ever witnessed in our Democracy. We are like the hill billy who beholding a hippopotamus for the first time, stoutly declared: "There ain't no such animal."

For the first time since President Roosevelt was elected chief magistrate of the United States, we are genuinely sorry for him. His haste to crack back at his political enemies, his overweening confidence in the men who assist him in his reform measures, his imperious will to have his own way willy nilly, and his conviction that whatever he desires to do is right, are all reflected in this ill-considered selection of a blatant demagogue to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

It has already been remarked that this appointment practically precludes any more talk of increasing the number of Supreme Court justices. For the moment this scheme is mentioned again there will be the chorus: "What for? To appoint more Ku Kluxers?" The President, as he should, pays little heed to abuse, but no man is born who could stomacn the ridicule of a nation. We suspect, therefore, that we shall hear little in the future about court packing.

But the inference to be drawn from his recent address upon the Constitution reveals the President's determination to continue the drive against the power of the court. It goes without saying that whatever power the court loses to declare laws constitutional or unconstitutional will immediately be appropriated by the President and Congress. In however much the President is able to weaken the Supreme Court by that much he will strengthen his own power, and while we still believe that the President when he thunders of dictatorships that threaten us, does not for a moment suspect that his own course is heading in that direction, unless he is balked again in his attempt to destroy the constitutional functions of the court, we shall surely come to a dictatorship, and perhaps a worse one, than the benevolent one the President unconsciously reaches for.

The real indictment against the President's course is his unnwillingness to trust the people to enact a constitutional amendment in accord with his desire to clip the court's powers. There is the remedy, provided for in the constitution itself, for all the President's complaints. Instead of referring his grievance to the people who elected him President, he has recourse to "direct action," politically speaking. The very fact that the President undertakes to coerce Congress, through the enormous control of appropriations which Congress itself surrendered to him, to do something that by its very nature is reserved for the people to do, damns his proposal in the minds of all intelligent and patriotic citizens.

There is so much to be done of really constructive character, it is a pity that the nation must be rent with this quarrel over the Supreme Court, and its personnel. There is the Wagner act that needs a thorough overhauling to make it serviceable to all the people. At present it is little better than an adjunct of John L. Lewis' labor organization. We are beginning to suspect that those appointed to administer the act are second rate, down-at-the-heels politicians without vision and without capacity for the job. Again much needs to be done to simplify the old age security and unemployment acts. As they stand now they increase the cost of doing business throughout the country by a greater sum than the tax itself amounts to.

Then there is relief. What shall we do about it? Where shall we draw the line? Who shall administer relief? Washington 3,000 miles away, or city councils and county supervisors, who of their own knowledge know who are habitual mendicants and who are in actual need of aid? The decline of the Roman Empire was due partly to the charities of the Caesars. They began to curry favor of the poor by feeding them bread and by giving free shows in the colosseum. The more given the more demanded, until finally the empire was so impoverished and dominated by wastrels and beggars that it became an easy prey to sturdier peoples. History can teach us many a lesson if we will only read and ponder.

DUDLEY NAMED ON EXPOSITION MINE COUNCIL

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 23.—Assuring Nevada Countys representation in the Hall of the Mineral Empire at the 1939 World's Fair in San Francisco, E. B. Dudley, chairman of the board of supervisors, today was nominated for membership on the advisory council of Mining Exhibits Inc.

EMPTIES MAGAZINE BUT BUCK GETS AWAY

Of recent years deer have been such a traffic menace, especially during the closed season, on the Tahoe Ukiah highway five or six miles east of Nevada Ctiy that several hunting parties have been coursing through the woods in canyons adjacent to Harmony Ridge in a patriotic endeavor to reduce hazards on the road.

In such a party early Wednesday morning were Frank Ghidotti, Dick Lane and Joe Huey. After skirmishing through the brush for a mile or so south of the highway, an eight point buck suddenly leaped out his "midnight lair" within forty feet of Frank Ghidotti who was leading the procession with a new automatic rifle. Ghidotti called out "Here he comes boys!" For perhaps two hundred feet the magnificent stag pranced along in front of Frank who immediately, as the military phrase has it, began firing at will. And still the buck leaped and pranced. All this while immediately behind Ghidotti, was Dick Lane with his gun up and ready but never a chance to shoot because the Ghidotti blocked the view, or at least a considerable portion of it. After awhile Frank's magazine was emptied but he continued with his finger hard on the trigger for some time after the deer had disappeared. Back of him Dick Lane was urgently whispering: "Move over. Let me have a chance." The buck got clean away though Ghidotti declares he tickled him a little, and on his last bounce, the buck's ears did waggle slightly. And Dick Lane whispered: "And there he goes boys!"

APPLE HARVEST OF N. CO. NOW IN FULL SWING

The apple harvest in Nevada county is in full swing with the King Davids, Jonathans and Delicious apples being picked and washed in both packing houses. The fruit has become so popular that the crop so far is being handled by local stores in the county. Among the ranches picking apples are Ullrich Brothers, Loma Rica Rancho, Frank Seley, all northeast and south of Grass Valley; Herman Hartung and Mr. Walters, Pleasant Valley, besides several ranches near Grass Valley.

The yield is exceptionally good and of fine size this year. Only three boxes of these outstanding varieties on display at the state fair this month took several prizes.

The pear harvest which continues in the Chicago Park section will be completed at the end of this week. The largest crop of President plums in many years is also being packed and shipped. It is expected they will all be harvested by the end of this week.

NEVADA COUNTY MINE OUTPUT IS 25 PCT. OF STATE

By H. P. DAVIS

Exclusive of production of itinerant prospectors, snipers and high-graders, California's gold production for 1936, lode and placer, amounted to 1,077,442 ounces, value $37,710,470.00, an increase of 21 per cent over 1935.

902 lode mines of the state produced $23,380,665 or 62 per cent of the total; 639 placer mines produced $14,329,805 or 38 per cent of the total. The percentage in 1935 was lode mines, 61 and placer 39 per cent.

While 49 of California's 58 counties are reported as having marketed gold in 1936, only eleven counties contributed as much as $1,000,000 each.

Sacramento county, next to Nevada in production, contributed $3,666,125 entirely from placers.

Nevada county, as usual by long odds the premier gold producer, contributed 282,799 ounces of gold, valued $9,897,265, 26.2 per cent of the gold production of the state.

42 lode mines in Nevada county produced $9,543,555 or 96½ per cent and 32 placers $353,710 or 3½ per cent of the county's gold production.

The total value of the mine production of Nevada county, including silver $352,665, copper $12,328, lead $12,969 (practically all by products of gold mining operations) was $10,274,054; 24.8 per cent of the total value of mine production of California in 1936.

The figures for individual mine production are not available, but it is safe to estimate that the lode mines of the Grass Valley-Nevada City districts, all but one, of which lie within a radius of five miles contrbiuted about 95 per cent of the total for the county.

It is estimated that the gold mining operation of small area, predominantly lode mines, will, in 1937, produce gold and silver to the value of about $12,300,000.

The total payroll for the gold mines of the Grass Valley-Nevada City districts exceeds $4,250,000 a year Approximately 2400 men are employed in this small area, at union wages, and the per man production exceeds $5000 per annum.

An anaylsis of the first nine months of 1937, indicates a slight falling off in number of men employed, but, owing to wage increases, little change in the amount of the payroll.

CAMP PAHATSI WORK STARTED

Work on the cellar and the wash porch extension of the scout lodge at Camp Pahatsi was slowed up somewhat for the work party this week end due to adverse rock conditions preparatory to placing forms for concrete walls. More powder work is necessary. This will be done next week end.

With one truck on the job last week two loads of lumber and three yards of gravel were hauled. Next week end other trucks will be needed to haul additional gravel and lumber. The lumber is being donated and so far most of the excavation has been done by older scouts.

Last week H. S. Foreman of Nevada City furnished a truck and Dal Kalbaugh of Grass Valley did the powder work. Others assisting in the construction were L. H. Reynolds, Dick Ebbert and J. Ricksecker of Auburn, Ernest Young and Gordon Foreman of Nevada City and H. Ricksecker.

A compressor to drive the new well has been promised together with workers who are scouts and parents of scouts.

Peace Has Its Price

If America truly wants peace, and there is every reason to believe she does, then Americans must pay a price for it.

That price is paid for in our growing ability to check indignant tempers when we hear of Americans slain or injured in China, or hear of American property damaged and American ships bombed.

Now that China has announced that she is bracing herself for a five years' war with Japan, and now that Japan has determined to convert all of China's 300,000,000 square miles into a war zone, we can expect the price of peace for America to take another stiff boost upward. Conversion of all China into a battleground will mean that America's $500,000,000 worth of investments in the Orient will be further imperiled. A blockade of Chinese ports, and probable investigation of any American vessel suspected of carrying war materials, challenges America's traditional doctrine of the freedom of the seas. Thousands of Americans in China, both civilian and military, are potential victims of Chinese or Japanese shells, and we must be prepared to see some of them die if America is to keep the peace!

No, indeed—the price of peace is no soft bargain. It takes a strong will, a stiff neck, rugged determination, and above all—cool tempers.—Contributed.

Cops Up in the Air

Don't be too alarmed if in the near future an autogiro or baby blimp heaves into sight over your speeding automobile on the highway.

To be sure, it will be a sign of war all right, but these air machines will be the advance guard of California's state highway patrol, warring against the hazards of traffic and its mounting death toll.

E. Raymond Cato, chief of this patrol, is submitting this new proposal for fighting disaster on the highways with aircraft. They'll help greatly, it's said, in spotting accidents, car-jammed roads, and reckless drivers.

It's to be hoped, however, drivers will continue to keep their eyes on the road. If they drive with their heads in the clouds they're apt to get bumped by the traffic patrol blimp! —Contributed.

PEOPLE TO VOTE ON CRACKPOT PENSION BILLS

By RALPH H. TAYLOR

If O'Henry's fictional "Gentle Grafters" suddenly came to life in twentieth century America, they would undoubtedly forsake all the time-worn confidence games of bygone eras as piker rackets and blossom forth as the originators of bigger and better old age pension schemes.

But to get a hearing in California, they would need something exceedingly expansive and sumptuous—possibly a sure fire retirement system for all Californians who had achieved voting age, or something of that oder. Anything less, in view of the schemes already proposed for next year's ballot, would probably fail to attract attention.

One of the proposals suggested for the 1938 ballot, for example, has as its objective a $100 per month pension for every Californian over 45 years of age. This scheme, advanced by California Retirement Annuities, Inc., of Los Angels, headed by a gentleman named James Furlonce, has reached the stage of securing an initiative title from the attorney general's office. Mr. Furlonce says that his pension plan would be financed by a 2 per cent transactions tax.

Then, there is the "25 Every Monday Morning" plan, which popped up for hearing in the recent session of the state legislature. This, too, will be placed on the ballot if its sponsors can collect sufficient funds to circulate initiative petitions.

Third—and most likely to qualify for submission to the voters—is the $100 per month plan for persons over 60 years of age, sponsored by Edward Margett of San Francisco, former Townsend leader in the bay area. Mr. Margett, who split with Dr. Townsend after bitter controversy, proposes to use revenues derived from the state sales tax to finance his pension plan. He is now busy at the task of raising the $30,000 fund necessary to circulate initiative petitions.

The basic fault in all of these grandiloquent schemes is that they are economically impossible. Any voter who reasons recognizes that a $100 per month pension for every person over 45, if it were actually placed in operation, would mean intolerable tax burdens and economic slavery for every person under 45.

The 2 per cent transactions tax, proposed as a means of financing the $100 plan for those over 45, would be a turnover tax on all commodities, pryamiding with each transaction and raising the cost of food products and other commodities to prohibitive levels, as it would be levied in addition to the present 3 per cent state sales tax. The farmers, as well as consumers, it would spell economic disaster, as it would build up price resistance which would break down the demand for commodities.

The Magett scheme of using the state sales tax to defray the costs of his $100 pension for persons over 60 is no less impractical. In the first place, the revenues from the sales tax, great as they are, would only be sufficient to pay a small fraction of a $100 per month pension to California residents over 60. Where the balance of the money would come from is problematical. And in the second place, if the sales tax revenues were taken for old age pensions, it would rob the schools of their present major source of income and either force the levying of new taxes or the shut down of the public school system.

The chief dange to farmers, workers, business men—and citizens generally who still believe in industry and frugality as the only real source of security—is that such schemes may find ready support from hundreds of thousands of unthinking voters, together with active support from many persons who fall in the age groups which would make them beneficiaries under the plans. And with nearly a half million new voters, who have come here penniless from the Dust Bowl and other stricken areas in the United States, the danger is not to be discounted.

California's present pension of $35 per month for the aged is the most liberal in the United States. But there must be reason in everything. Otherwise those who are now paying the bills will soon be on relief, too, with no one left to foot the relief bill, nor pay legitimate pension costs year will be a good year for voting year will bea good year for voting taxpayers to be wary. There are still a lot of people who believe they can get "something for nothing!"

Doug Farmer of Boulder street killed a fine two pointer on Spanish Ridge last Sunday. In the party were A. C. Larsen and son, Cameron Larsen, and Frank Cartoscelli.

UNICAMERAL LEGISLATURE IS MUCH OPPOSED

The proposal to establish the unicameral, or one-house, legislature in California, the initiative petition for which was given title by Attorney General U. S. Webb's office last week, will meet with active opposition from business, industrial and agricultural organizations throughout the state, according to plans being mapped today by the California Crusaders.

"This scheme presented by Assemblyman S. W. Yorty of Los Angeles," declared Samuel J. Hume, director of the Crusaders, "is nothing more than an attempt by the disgruntled, left wing minority members of the Assembly to destroy the present form of legislature by eliminating the Senate and to create in its place a glorified Assembly consisting of 80 members elected on a basis of population. If successful, they can then proceed to enact into law the mass of radical, prejudiced and ill-advised legislation which they sponsored but saw defeated during the recent session of the legislature.

"This unicameral plan would give complete domination of the legislature to the large cities and would deprive the agricultural districts and smaller communities of the protection they now enjoy by equitable representation in the Senate.

"The political control of the state" continued Hume, "would immediately be vested in the ten counties of southern California which would be given 43 of the 80 representatives provided by the proposed unicameral Legislature. This issue however, he contended, "transcends narrow sectionalism. It constitutes a distant threat to the integrity, welfare and future of all California."

The Crusaders, according to Hume, will immediately launch a state wide campaign against the initiative proposal. Letters are being sent today inviting representatives of business groups, service clubs, agricultural societies, civic bodies and other organizations to take part in the fight. The Crusaders' executive committees, organized in 28 counties of northern California, will act as coordinating mediums for these organizations. A southern California unit will be established later.

COASTAL WAR CUTS OFF THIRD CHINA REVENUE

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 24 — If China's foreign trade were destroyed by the Japanese navy, 36.9 per cent of her ational revenues as provided in the current budget would disappear, accordig to an analysis prepared by the American Council, Institute of Pacific Relations. Tariff revenues have long been the major source of income for the National Government, and the demoralization of foreign trade would be a heavy blow to a treasury now faced with unprecedented war time demands. Recent events have shown how vulerable is China's foreign trade to Japanese attack, unprotected as it is against the powerful Japanese navy.

If customs revenues are thus severly crippled, foreign and Chinese creditors of the National Government are likely also to suffer. Of the total gross collections of U. S. $98.0 millions last year, $25.1 millions, or 25.6 per cent was allocated to the service of foreign loans and indemnities and $39.0 millions or 39.8 per cent to internal loans service. For decades the customs revenues have been a highly rated security for foreign and domestic borrowing. Consequently the bulk of this income in the past has gone regularly for the service of such obligations. The secured foreign loans of the National Government outstanding on July 1, 1937, totalled $271.8 millions, of which $156.7 millions were secured upon customs revenue. The amount of these securities held in the United States is thought to be small; the largest proportion is probably British held.

If the customs revenues now dwindle rapidly, China will be faced with the difficult decision as to whether to default on her foreign loans and lose the hard won credit position she has recently gained, or to allocate funds for this purpose from sources which are already far too slender to support a major military campaign. In this connecttion it may be said that heavy losses of income are likely to result from the widening of the area under Japanese military control even though foreign trade is allowed to continue. This may be inferred from the conquest of Manchuria and Jehol and the creation of an autonomous regime in East Hopei, where in each case the Japanese advance deprived the Chinese central government of the customs and salt revenues in these areas.

This reliance on income from tariff duties is one of a number of ways in which the National Government is heavily dependent on the trade and industry of the rich treaty port areas along the coast and up the Yangtse river The board scope of Japan's military operations indicates, however, that for the time being at least large revenues from these provinces are likely to be lost to the Nanking government. Tientsin and most other North China ports are already under Japanese control. Last year these ports furnished 19.0 per cent of the customs revenues, but at present the returns from this region must be greatly curtailed, if indeed they have not ceased altogether.

At present, commerce at Shanghai is completely disrupted, not only because of the war danger in Whangpoo river but because of extensive damage to wharves, factories, and communication facilities and the total demoralization of foreign and Chinese business in that great port city. Shanghai alone supplied about 45.8 per cent of the national tariff revenues last year. The rich region of the lower Yangtse valley, in fact, has been the economic base of the Nanking government, and the loss of Shanghai, which, in addition to its importance in foreign trade, is the financial center of China and the site of one third of her modern industry would be a severe blow.

Finally, Japan's "pacific blockade" of the South China coastal trade, including that of the mouth of the Yangtse, threatens to demoralize the trade of eight other ports which accounts for 9.0 per cent of China's custom revenues, as well as to cripple the trade of ports up the Yangtse.

JUST WONDERIN'

I wonder when the hunter's come
With guns and dogs and human skill,
To bag their share of mourning dove
And stalk the deer they hope to kill,
If they will keep one thing in mind
And so in true accord conspire
To leave each forest path they tread
Unbranded by the curse of fire.

I wonder if you have ever envied the joyous irresponsibility of sea faring sportsmen. They that go down to the sea in fishing smacks leave carking care behind; stern duties and responsibilities do not follow in their wake, no solemn warnings are dinned into their reluctant ears. They menace nothing, create no hazards; nature regards them as inconsequential, the hands and voices of their fellow men are not raised against them. They may fish for small fry or large, play the leaping tuna for many exciting hours, spear a porpoise, or tow a whale back to port; what does it matter? Nothing has been marked or marred, devastated or destroyed. The fish that got away winks knowingly, adjusts his rumpled scales and darts away in pursuit of his own natural prey, the little fish. Neptune slumbers on, the untroubled main shimmers under the light of a perfect day, reflects the crimson and gold of a magnificent sunset or wears upon her bosom the duplicated majesty of the silent midnight heavens. The fishermen have come and gone and left no trace behind.

They that go up to the mountains in wheeled conveyances find conditions strangely different. Hunters are potential. Warnings and admonitions dampen their ardor, duty dogs their footsteps, responcibilities shadow every forest aisle. Each article of hunting equipment is packed in a layer of don'ts; don't tear down the farmer's fences, don't shoot his cows, horses, dogs and little pigs; don't mistake your hunting companion for a deer, don't shoot a spike buck, don't hunt along the highway, don't shoot from your automobile, don't throw lighted matches and cigarettes aside, don't forget—that's it, don't forget to drown the campfire, don't forget that the game warden is just around the corner and the forster in his lookout; don't forget that— Fire is the Forest's Prime Evil.

If I were a hunter, I would exchange my hunting license for a fishing outfit; I would so.

I wonder, in view of that peculiar hunting accident, wherein one man mistakes another for an antlered buck, why we never hear of a fisherman mistaking his pal for a big fish.

AUTO CRASHES KILL 126 DAILY

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 24.—The Omnibus Liquor Control Act—Senate Bill 425—went on the books August 27. This new legislation contains 102 sections designed to revamp the present plan of liquor control. It represents an effort on the part of the liquor industries to clean up, and the public will soon know whether a temperate use of liquor can be effected through legislation. Meanwhile 50,000 Americans are conscribed for death this year at the rate highway killings are skyrocketing. A present 21 per cent increase over automobile fatalities of 1936 now crushes out the life of 126 Americans every day in the year. Of these liquor is not the only cause, but ranks with speed as one of the two major, and preventable, causes.

Of 93 bills and constitutional amendments introduced in the last legislature, only six passed both branches and got to the Governor's desk. Of these one died by the pocket veto, and five were signed and became law. The bill vetoed was Senate Bill 388 giving Indians equal rights in drinking whiskey.

Beside the Omnibus Liquor Act—Senate Bill 425—the following bills were made law by the Governor's signature:

Assembly Bill 1306. Lengthens the airlane distance between legal sale of liquor and dry zones such as unniversities and veterans' homes. Provides: "Distances provided in this act shall be measured not by air line but by following the shortest road or roads connecting the points in question."

Assembly Bill 2587. Reaffirms two o'clock closing law.

Assembly Bill 1021. Outlaws bar maids mixing drinks behind the counter. They are free, however, to work the outside of the counter as "bar flies:" and the way the bill is drawn can lawfully become bar maids again if they marry the bartender.

Assembly Bill 116. Enforcement of standards and quality provisions relating to wines and brandy.

The criminal docket of the Federal Court in San Francisco reveals some startling facts for those who thought bootlegging would end with Repeal. The most important indictment this year for moon-shining and conspiracy in illicit liquor violation —Criminal Case No. 25905—names the following defendants: Alex Felizianetti; Dave Zanolli, John Angrella; Theodore Conderas; Joseph A. Freitas; George Miller.

One of the briefer musical criticisfs appeared in the local paper: "An amateur string quartet played Brahms here last evening. Brahms lost."

FARMERS BATTLE TO MAINTAIN LABOR FREEDOM

By RALPH H. TAYLOR

Strikes and industrial disorders have rushed into headlines with such monotonous regularity during the past year that the average citizen, unless directly affected, has doubtless developed a tendency to pass over the news of labor's wars in sheer disgust or weary confusion —and turn to the sports page, mutterings the while about the stupidity of humanity.

It is a natural reaction, for the man on the street, busy with his own problems, quickly tires of continued turmoil (if he is somewhat detached from the battle) and is disposed to let someone else solve the turbulent problems of the universe. He has troubles enough of his own. And besides, he philosophizes, everything comes in cycles; eventually the pendulum will swing back and the situation will correct itself.

But this state of mind, more than any other factor, is responsible for the continuation of industrial disorders in the metropolitan areas which have caused terific losses to workers and employers alike and which, collectively, represent a disaster much worse than the most calamitous earthquake, floor or fire. San Francisco, as a current object lesson, has been paralyzed by a series of strikes and jurisdictional wars betweennri val unions which not only has cost the bay area untold millions in losses, but which threaten to divert a large percentage of the city's permanent trade to other communities. Scores of businesses have been closed or seriously disrupted, not by any conflict over wages or working hours, but because opposing unions engaged in bitter struggle for control of the same group of workers. And as a result, business and jobs are evaporating—grabbed up by commercial rivals in other cities—while San Francisco, which has always prided itself on being the finest union town in America, is penalized and sandbagged for its generosity.

Despite the fact that the Wagner Labor Relations Act definitely exempts farm labor from its provisions, union organizers in California have attempted to high-pressure agricultural employers into accepting the act and operating under its terms Delay of the Lamor Relations Board in defining "agricultural workers" has added to the confusion and the farmers' committee, through its counsel, Mr. McDaniel, has asked a speedy decision. The committee contends that in its broad exemption of agricultrual workers, it was the intent of Congress to include all types of employees engaged in planting, cultivating, harvesting, preparing for market and storing produce in its fresh and natural state. Union organizers, however, claim that packing house workers are subject to regulation by the Regional Labor Board, but the agricultural committee is determined to carry its demand for interpretation of the Wagner Act to the Supreme Court if the Labor Relations Board attempts to assume jurisdiction.

MIDDLE YUBA MINES

One of the two draglines of the company is working at the Middle Yuba gravel property being operated by the American Zinc Company. Seven men are employed. The present work is of an exploratory nature. Two years ago the channel of the Middle Yuba river was diverted by flume around a large gravel deposit and where an old channel had been traced under a bank of the present river. An immense pit was excavated all surface gravel being removed by two drag lines. Edward Poorman of San Jacinto is part owner of the property and came up last week to look over the work.

FAIR COMMENT

"I think that I shall never see a poem lovlier than a piece of high-grade. What a poem that piece owned by Dr. Carl P. Jones of Grass Valley was at the State Fair. Also the specimens from Idaho Maryland. The mining exhibits alone were well worth battling through perspiring crowds to see."—Mining and Industrial News.

A cleanup has been made at the Queen Lil custom mill west of Nevada City, on the first run of ore from the Defender mine in Amador county, with good recovery of values. The second of the three runs started Wednesday morning. H. D. Draper is in charge of the mill for J. R. Bardill, owner.

MT. VIEW PROPERTY

The mill has been installed at the Mt. View mine near Washington. Four men are employed under J. F. White. The mill was purchased from the Eagle Bird property in the same district seveal months ago and has been trucked to the Mt. View.

RATTLESNAKE BAR

S. Granger has taken a dredger and drag line into Rattlesnake Bar below Wolsey's Bar on the Middle Yuba river near Graniteville. The equipment had to be moved by hand down the river about three quarters of a mile as there was not sufficient water for it to float. It is stated there are about -,000,000 yards of gravel with gold content of $1.00 per yard.

LAVA CAP PROPERTIES

Ore reserves at the Lava Cap mines are increasing rapidly and are now estimated between 200,0000 and 300,000 tons. The new ore body opened up on the 1800 level has also been opened up on the 1,400 and 2,000 foot levels, with limits as yet not determined. On the 1800 level it was found that the ore body is 470 feet long and about 30 inches wide and giving satisfactody assays per ton. Otto E. Schiffner is general manager.

SHOVEL PLACERS

The Shovel Placers Mining Company was incorporated recently for $100,000, by W. S., Thomas C. and Chester W. Bigelow and Paul I. Dudley Columbia Hill; C. B. Pierson, Castiac, and Charles H. Grant, San Francisco. The company is installing a plant involving new processes for handling gold and gravel in that section.

SPRING HILL

Limited operations are being carried on at the Spring Hill mine near Grass Valley. A winze has been sunk from the 1100 to the 1250 level. Raises have been driven into ore that compares favorably with values opened up previously. The partial stoping and development program keeps the 100 ton mill on a one shift basis. D. McLaughlin and S. Marshall of San Francisco are principal owners. C. C. Cushwa is in charge of operations.

TENSE DRAMA OF MOTHER LOVE AT THEATRE SAT.

Whether cut and dried court methods are sufficient to weigh the fitness of a mother to have the custody of her child is the vital problem which keys the action of "Midnight Madonna", the drama which opens on Saturday at the Nevada Theatre.

Taking a long step forward toward turning the spotlight of public opinion on legal procedure notoriously limited in its ability to weigh the all-important "human factor," the new screen drama is considered one of the most thought-provoking documents to reach the screen.

Basically, the plot centers about the efforts of a wastrel father, played by Robert Baldwin, to obtain custody of his four year old daughter, played by Kitty Clancy, who is made heiress of a huge estate. Because the mother is a night club entertainer and had mingled with New York's sporting fraternity, she is held not to be a fit person to rear the youngster.

Mady Correll, a newcomer to the screen from the New York stage and considered certain to achieve stardom, plays the mother role. She is aided in her fight to keep her baby by Warren William, a happy-go-lucky gambler.

The picture fearlessly portrays the means employed by crooked lawyers to wrest children from parents in the high game of legal trickery where huge estates are involved. In this it is an exact reflection of several similar cases which have made the headlines during recent months.

In her role as night club entertainer, Miss Correll, a sterling beauty, sings two popular songs written expressly for the film by the team of Johnston and Burke, best known for their recent hit "Pennies from Heaven."

The picture is laid against a brilliant background of New York's night life. The cast includes over one hundred beautiful chorus girls, Jonathan Hale, Edward Ellis, and many other well known featured players. It was directed by James Flood.

PLANE AMPLIFIER TO DIRECT FOREST FIRE FIGHTERS

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 23.—Projecting the voice from an airplane to the ground by means of a voice amplifier is one of many experiments now being conducted by the United States Forest Service for the reduction and control of forest fires in the national forests of California according to a recent statement made by Regional Forester S. B. Show.

According to Fred W. Funke, Forest Service fire control equipment officer, who recently returned from a trip over the Stanislaus National Forest where airplane broadcasting tests were made, "Experiments with the voice amplifier indicate that it is adequate for all Forest Service communication purposes for which it is expedient to project the voice from an airplane to the ground. I believe it will have a definite usefulness in searching for and directing lost persons and organized crews engaged in such work; directing fire line crews to spot fires which may be located from the air; warning fire crews of impending danger; directing fire crews on the line when sudden changes in condition of the fire are observed from the air, and in other emergencies."

The voice amplifier used by the Forest Service is the Coast Guard type and complete with battery weighs 305 pounds. A triple speaker unit drives a single metal horn which is placed over the side of the airplane and directed towards the ground. A message can be given to men on the ground by the operator in the plane from an average distance of 1 1-2 miles. When the motor speed of the plane is cut to a low cruising range the voice is clearly projected.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown and babe of McAllen, Texas are spending some time visiting Mrs. Brown's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Murchie in this city.

LIVES MENACED BY VANDALS WHO DESTROY SIGNS

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 23. — An alarming increase in the damage done to State Highway signs during the last three months by vandals caused Director of Public Works Earl Lee Kelly today to issue an appeal to the citizens of California to cooperate with the Division of Highways and the California Highway Patrol in bringing about the arrest and prosecution of persons responsible for destroying hundreds of important highway safety signs.

Director Kelly called attention to the fact that the vehicle code provides for a maximum sentence for defacing highway signs of $500 fine and six months in jail or both. He said that the damage to signs from bullet holes is becoming a factor that is seriously reducing the efficiency of these signs and in many cases results in the complete loss to the public and the endangering of human life. He said that a recently signed U. S. numbered route was inspected two weeks after the numbered shields were installed and all but one shield in a stretch of forty miles had been pierced by bullets. One reflector erected to warn motorists of a dangerous "S" curve and concrete culvert on the Jack Tone Road two miles south of Lockford in San Joaquin county was blasted with 14 bullets and 47 of 51 reflectors were pried from the sign, making its warning message virtually non-visible to night drivers.

FORT ROSS GIVES U. C. SEEDS FROM MANCHURIA

DAVIS, Sept. 24.—Furthering the agricultural contributions of the Russian colonists who settled in the Fort Ross region 125 years ago, Al Farafontoff, chairman of the executive committee of Fort Ross, has sent to the University of California twenty-four packages of seed obtained by him in Manchuria. The gift, he says is in commemoration of the 125th anniversary of the Fort Ross settlement under Lieutenant Ivan Kuskov.

Coming to the northern California coast in 1812 these Russian colonists worked with great energy, and the remains of their settlement still are visible. They paid particular attention to agriculture and from Fort Ross came an apple, a plum, a pear, and a cherry which spread over the entire state.

The seeds Farafontoff has sent the University, and which will be planted on the Davis campus, at the Branch of the College of Agriculture are those of plants and cereals either new to California or which he believes may be instrumetal in bringing about an improvement of present varieties. They were sent to Director Knowles A. Ryerson of the Branch of the College of Africulture, and have been distributed among the pomology, truck crops, and the landscape design divisions.

The seeds include rutabagas, cucumbers, melons, lettuce, cherry, cedar, birch, ash, batat, and lilac.

B. P. W. C. HELD DINNER MEETING LAST EVENING

Hirsch of Grass Valley chose as his topic "Ancient Tales in Modern Dress" and proved a most interesting and entertaining speaker. Mrs. Sarah Campbell of Grass Valley also gave a reading.

AUGUST GAS TAX TAKES BIG JUMP

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 23.—Gasoline tax revenue for month of August, 1937, shows a gain according to report today from the Board of Equalization.

Taxes for the month of August amounted to $4,648,400, an increase of 10.75 per cent over the same month of the year 1936. This tax is in excess of the July, 1937, tax in the amount of $72,236.43.

Taxable gallonage distributed during August, 1937, was 154,946,667 gallons.

Oil companies reporting sales of more thhan 300,000 gallons in August were listed by the board with the explanation that resale of gasoline previously taxed and exempt sales to the federal government or in interstate or foreign commerce accounted for differences between total sales and taxable sales.
